Buckets, spades and flip-flops

What images spring to mind when you think of the Summer Holidays? I suppose we all conjure images that reflect the summers of our childhood. For me, it's ye olde bucket and spade, a beach towel and flip-flops.

What seems so precious, looking back, is just how inconsequential the time was. We would rush, (well no, we didn't rush, I think my mother had a nightmare of a time getting us all organised) to go to the beach. I'd spend the day building sandcastles. I loved it, patting and moulding sand into shape trying to make conically-topped towers that would inevitably collapse, and moats whose sides fell in. And then the tide would come in at the end of the day and wash the whole thing away. I didn't really mind, it was all the better for starting afresh the next day.

As for flip-flops – they were certainly part of the soundtrack of our summers – that funny slapping noise they make as you walk along, f*lip . . . flop . . . flip . . . flop . . .* accompanied by the sound of children's laughter, and perhaps the splashes of a swimming pool or the rolling breakers of the sea –bottle it as the sound of being on holiday. But I was never really a fan, give me plimsolls anytime. That thong between the toes was always too big for my feet and rubbed and hurt. You couldn't run in them. I tried; the flip-flops stayed where they were, leaving me limping on across the stoney ground. If I walked through the dunes or in a field, spikey grass would pierce my feet like spears….. whoever thought these were a good idea?

And yet, flip-flops and sandcastles have important lessons for me in my adult years, and not just for the holidays. There can be no monumental ambition when you build a sandcastle, however beautiful you try to make it, people will kick it over, the sea will come in, and it will be gone, as if it's never been there.

I treasure what I learnt about impermanence during those summers, mankind likes to make monuments, but nature needs us to move on.

As for flip-flops and not being able to run, well, perhaps life isn't meant to be lived at a sprint. Many of us race from one appointment to another, checking our phones every few minutes, planning tomorrow before we've started today. We're busy making a living while forgetting to make a life. The humble flip-flop won't protect us from many of the hardships of our journey, we'll get dusty, but we'll know the ground we've walked on, and enjoy that walk best when we're present in the moment, just like a child building a sandcastle.

May God bless every moment of your Summer.

With love, Romey

Volunteers on 20 & 21 July – and in August

Can you help with our new floor?

The key dates are:
Monday 20 July – carry the new floorboards into the Hall
Tuesday 21 July – carry the insulation rolls into the Hall
Monday 10 and Tuesday 11 August – remove the old flooring
During August & early September clearing and making good.....

Please contact Ian Jennings (ijennings263@btinternet.com; 07920 721911) for more information and when you can help.

To save costs much of the work is being done by volunteers. We are now looking for your help during July and August. Protective gloves and masks will be available.

With support from UDC, the old wooden floor in the Village Hall is to be replaced with oak floorboards. This also enables us to put in under-floor insulation as recommended by the Village Hall Energy Assessment.
We will also lay cables under the floor to provide the infrastructure to support any future development of the Hall for wider activities, such as drama performances and other events.

The Hall will be closed from the 10 August to the 14 September.

The old wooden floorboards will be available for home fires – first come, first served!
Please help where you can.

PUBLIC HOUSES IN HADSTOCK THROUGH THE CENTURIES.

A Hadstock Society Article to promote the Hadstock Archive.

There are records of two pubs in Hadstock over the centuries:-

1. THE KING'S HEAD, HADSTOCK — documented as a public house in the village's historical records.

The King's Head in Hadstock has a welldocumented sequence of landlords stretching from at least 1769 to the 2010's. The most complete and authoritative list comes from the Alehouse Recognizances and trade directories.

Full Timeline of Known Landlords

(All entries sourced from Alehouse Recognizances, census records, Kelly's/White's/ Post Office directories and Crocky.)*

1772, 1778, 1784 — Christopher Wright
1787 — William Free

1801, 1804, 1806 — Sibitha (Tabitha) Adcock
1816 — Sibitha Adcock
1825 — Samuel Free
Mid–Late 19th Century (Hymus Era)
The Hymus/Himus family dominated the pub for decades, often combining the trade with wheelwright work.
1845 — 1881 Stephen Himus (Wheelwright & Victualler)

1881 — Lucy Hymus (Licensed Victualler)
Note: 1881 census does not explicitly name the premises, but residents match the pub household.
1882 — 1894 Henry Hymus
1894 — 1895 William Stephen Hymus

1898 — 1902 Charles Whitmore

Notes & Context
The long tenure of the Himus/Hymus family suggests the pub was closely tied to the village's wheelwright business.
The building itself is Grade II listed as The Kings Head Inn, Linton Road, (now Kings House) confirming its long-standing historic importance.

2. THE QUEENS HEAD

The Queen's Head in Hadstock was an early village pub active by the late 19th–early 20th century, remembered today through local archives, photographs, and records of its landlords.

🏡 Overview and Historical Significance

The Queen's Head was one of Hadstock's small number of public houses and appears frequently in the Hadstock Village Archive, which preserves photographs and notes about village life. The pub is documented as active in the early 1900s, with images showing the building and its yard, as well as its landlord at the time, George Swann.

Although the pub no longer operates today, it forms part of the recorded social history of Hadstock, representing the era when small rural pubs served as central meeting places for agricultural workers, local families, and travellers.

Early 1900s operation Photographs from the Hadstock archive show the Queen's Head in the early 20th century, including a view from the back of Goldacre in the 1950s, which was once part of the pub's property.

Landlord: George Swann A named landlord from the early 1900s, George Swann appears in village records and photographs, indicating the pub's active role in community life at that time.

Location and setting The Queen's Head stood on Linton Road. This places it within the historic core of Hadstock, close to other notable village buildings.

- Later history By the mid20th century, the building had ceased operating as a pub. The 1950s photograph suggests the structure was still recognisable, though repurposed. The Hadstock archive does not indicate a reopening after this period.

Role in Village Life

Like many rural Essex pubs, the Queen's Head would have served as a social hub, offering a venue for gatherings, local announcements, and informal community support. The archive's emphasis on its imagery and its landlord suggests it was a wellknown fixture in the village's daily life.

The Queen's Head is now a private dwelling (Goldacre).

Early Context: Inns and Taverns in Hadstock

Hadstock is a very small parish, historically with only a few hundred residents. In such villages, it was typical for one main inn to serve as the social, commercial, and travel hub. Hadstock was once a market town, which supports the likelihood of at least one established inn serving traders and travellers.

Ale Houses

Historical records show that Hadstock had multiple licensed alehouses from at least the 1600s onward, typically run from ordinary village cottages or farmhouses rather than purposebuilt pubs. The only longdocumented establishments are the Queens Head and the King's Head, which operated for centuries.

Period	What existed in Hadstock?	Why we infer this
1500s–1600s	1–3 alehouses, unnamed	Every parish of similar size had them; licensing laws required registration.
1700s	At least one licensed alehouse	Essex Quarter Sessions records list many rural alehouses.
1800s	The King's Head (named)	Appears in trade directories and census data.
1900s	The King's Head continues until late 20th c.	Oral history and local directories.

How cryptic clues work

Cryptic crosswords are tiny puzzles within puzzles — every clue typically contains both a definition (usually at the beginning or end) and a hidden route to the answer.

Spot the trick and for some, the satisfaction is hard to match.

ANAGRAM

There is always an indicator word — Last month's indicators included: entangled, revisited, confusing, upset and crazy.

e.g. Ambition from Asian port I revisited (10)

Revisited is the indicator.

ASIAN PORT I rearranged gives ASPIRATION.

Ambition is the definition

HOMOPHONE

The answer sounds like a different word. Last month's indicators included: I hear and announced on radio.

e.g. I hear a French resort has a family connection (5)

I hear is the indicator. NICE (sounds like NIECE.

Family connection is the definition.

DELETION

A letter is removed from a word to make the answer. Last month's indicators included: headless, top off and overlooking the start of e.g. Whipped top off, put away (5)

Top off means remove the first letter. BEATEN (whipped) minus B = EATEN.

Put away is the definition.

DOUBLE DEFINITION

Two separate meanings of the same word placed side by side. There is no indicator — just two definitions sharing one answer.

e.g. Twist and turn (5)

The Twist is a DANCE

A turn on the dancefloor is also a DANCE

HIDDEN WORD

The answer is concealed inside the letters of the clue. Indicators: the centre of, within, hiding in, some, part of.

e.g. The centre of vote verification, the day before (4)

EVE is hidden inside votE VErification. The centre of is the indicator.

The day before is the definition.

CHARADE

Parts are combined in sequence to build the answer. Unlike an anagram, the letters are not scrambled — they are assembled in order.

e.g. Up sell kind of sandwich, at Royal St. George, for example (4,4)

Up in a down clue means reverse. FLOG (sell) reversed = GOLF. CLUB is a kind of sandwich. Royal St. George is a golf club — the definition.

No.6 coming next month.

Now you know the tricks — think you can crack it?

Hadstock Parish Council – May & June Highlights

The Parish Council met on 15 May 2026 and 25 June 2026 in the Village Hall. Councillors noted that recent meetings have occasionally run longer than hoped, and with members attending straight from work, late finishes can be tough. The Council will keep working to keep discussions focused and manageable. A reminder to all that from September, meetings will move to Wednesdays at 7pm. This is due to having access to the Village Hall prior to the start of the meetings, giving a better opportunity to prepare and organise for a public meeting, and not having to wait outside in the winter! Dates will be confirmed and advertised in due course. It was also noted that a Finance and Budget working group would be welcomed, to allow councillors to discuss informally and better understand the budget process.

Highways & Reports

Concerns continue around Walden Road, including drainage problems, verge damage and overgrown vegetation. The Clerk will request a meeting with Essex County Council, though contact with County Councillor Bo Davis has proved difficult. No updates affecting Hadstock were received from the District Councillor in June.

Governance

As part of the annual review Hadstock Parish Council considered its membership to what we call 'outside bodies'. This is a description of organisations of which the council are formally linked to and those that are directly associated with the village, but in an informal way. For the latter village groups, it was felt that rather than appointing individual representatives it would be better to engage collectively with village organisations. It was agreed to contact them individually to see whether twice-yearly community meetings would be welcomed, giving groups a chance to share updates and future plans making it an informative and a more sociable way for everyone to stay connected Councillors also reviewed governance arrangements for the Sustainable Hadstock Working Group. The group was originally set up to bring ideas and recommendations to the Parish Council on how best to protect and enhance Hadstock's environment. Over the last two years it has been exceptionally successful, thanks to the energy and leadership of Councillor John Lockton, and the many volunteers who have contributed their time and skills.

Because the group has grown, taken on more projects, and become much more active than first anticipated, councillors agreed that its governance now needs updating to reflect this success. Revised Terms of Reference are currently being consulted on, and an alternative option, for the group to operate independently, is also being explored so that Sustainable Hadstock can continue to thrive in a way that works well for both the volunteers and the Parish Council.

Finance

Routine payments were approved, and the duplicate payment to Nextnorth has now been successfully returned, this was due to teething problems with online banking. At the June meeting, the Council noted a bank balance of £25,228.97 which does include the ear marked funds from the Uttlesford District Council funding for Sustainable Hadstock.

Annual Governance & Accounting Review AGAR 2025/26

All annual governance and accounting documents were approved, and the Council confirmed its exemption status. Last year the Council was required to undergo a full External Audit because income and expenditure exceeded £25,000, a process that is both time-consuming and carries a financial cost for the Council, and ultimately for residents. The public inspection period runs from 1 July to 11 August 2026, all documents are on the website and notice board

Planning

A May application at Broadmarsh Cottage raised no objection, though councillors asked for confirmation that neighbours had been properly consulted. Planning items in June required no decisions.

Recreation Ground & Parish Land

Quotes will be sought for items highlighted as needing attention in the Annual Playground Inspection Report. Councillors agreed in principle for Sustainable Hadstock to hire a mower for meadow-cutting, and supported weed-suppression work in the copse area, subject to final costs.

Village Projects

Work continues on the 'Hundred Parishes map,' with several key village buildings now identified for inclusion. Councillor Lockton reported that the Big Green Week was well attended and positively received. Hadstock Parish Council will also add sign-posting links for village welfare support to both the website and the magazine.

Next Meeting

Thursday 30 July 2026 at 7.45pm, Village Hall.
